PREFACE.

THE Account of the Executors of Thomas de Bitton, Bishop of Exeter, which forms a portion of this volume, was discovered in 1867 by Mr. Stuart Moore among the archives of the city of Exeter, when he was employed in arranging those very interesting treasures. Happening to see it, I at once thought it deserved to be made public, and I wrote to my friend the late Mr. Bruce about it, and he soon informed me that the Council of the Camden Society would admit it amongst their issues if I would undertake the editorship.

Finding that the document contained a number of words of very obscure and doubtful meaning, I wrote to my friend the late Archdeacon Hale asking him to work it up, as he would have more ready access to Lexicons of all sorts than I could have in the country. He most kindly assented, telling me at the same time that he had lately found a very similar document of nearly the same date among the archives of S. Paul's, viz. the Account of the Executors of Richard de Gravesend, Bishop of London, who died 1303, six years before Bishop Bitton, This roll is twenty-six feet in length, written on one side. He thought the two would make a most interesting volume, and, upon bringing the matter before the Council of the Society, the proposal was accepted with great pleasure, and we were left to carry out the publication.

After this the Archdeacon went into the two accounts most heartily and with much enjoyment: fortunately he had finished the Introduction just before his death on November 27, 1870, so that there was very little left for me to finish of what his family handed over to me for that purpose; I cannot therefore claim much merit for my work as joint Editor.

I hope the Members of our Society will accept it as it is, and pardon the long delay in its publication, which, from various circumstances beyond my control, has been unavoidable.

I can truly say of Archdeacon Hale:—

Multis ille bonis flebilis occidit,
Nulli flebilior quam mihi.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS present volume, though bearing upon it the names of two bishops of English dioceses, Exeter and London, is rather secular than ecclesiastical in its character. As connected with the history of our Church and country it belongs to the first decade of the fourteenth century, 1300-1310, but it tells us little of what those prelates thought or did; it is the account rendered by the executors of their wills of the wealth which they possessed, the sources from which it was derived, and the disposition which they made of it when they died.

The two bishops are Thomas de Button, Bishop of Exeter, and Richard de Gravesend, Bishop of London. How far they were contemporary in age does not appear. The Bishop of London was the senior Bishop, having been consecrated in 1280, the Bishop of Exeter in 1292. The Bishop of London held his see twenty-three years, dying in December, 1303. The Bishop of Exeter held his see only fifteen years, dying in 1307. The executors' account of Bishop Button had been already printed when the Council of the Camden Society consented to add to it the account of the executors of Bishop Gravesend, which otherwise would have occupied the first place in the volume.

What is known of these bishops may be comprised in the following brief memoirs:—

The late Dean Milman, in his Annals of St. Paul's, has sketched the history of the time in which Richard de Gravesend lived, and drawn from his will, and the proceedings of his executors, some account of his character. Of him it may be said, as of his contemporary Thomas de Button, that he was of a worshipful family, his brother being Sir Stephen Gravesend, and the residence of the family at Gravesend in Kent, the poor of Milton sharing with the poor of Gravesend a legacy of ten pounds. For his brother, his brother's wife, and their children, the bishop seems to have entertained a strong affection. To him he bequeathed all the armour which graced as furniture the garderobe, in which were deposited his valuable books, and of which the six saddles for his esquires indicated that he had as many persons of that rank in his suite. To his brother's wife and her daughters he gave his bedding, robes in his wardrobe, and linen; to his niece Alice, a hundred marks as a marriage portion; to his nephew Stephen, Rector of Stepney, afterwards Bishop of London, one of his executors, his best Bible in thirteen volumes, valued at ten pounds. Another nephew, Richard, apparently serving in the household, had a legacy of forty shillings. By his will he released his brother from the debt which was due: the amount is not stated, but that which was due from other debtors he estimated at three hundred pounds. It was evidence of warm and grateful feeling that he directed his body to be buried in St. Paul's by the tomb of one of his predecessors, Henry de Sandwich, whom he terms "Promotoris mei."

Bishop Thomas de Button or Bitton,[a] as is related in the "Lives of the Bishops of Exeter," by the Rev. G. Oliver, D.D. (Exeter, 1861), was a native of Gloucestershire, and of a worshipful family. He was promoted from the deanery of Wells to the see of Exeter in 1292, and the temporalities were restored to him on the 2nd December in that year.[b] His parents were buried on the north side of the church of Bitton near Bristol, where he erected St. Catherine's Chapel,[c] and endowed in it a perpetual chantry.[d] The former vicar

[a] The family of Thomas de Bytton, alias Button, Bishop of Exeter, lived at Hannam, in the parish of Bitton, Gloucestershire. In 12 Edw. I. Plea Roll. Mic. (52), when Dean of Wells, he recovered a right of estover in Bitton, on the death of his mother, who had a life interest in it, as it had always been enjoyed by William de Bitton, his uncle, whose heir he was.

[b] See his pedigree in Nichols's Herald and Genealogist, Jan. 1867.

[c] Archdeacon Freeman, in his elegant book just published about Exeter Cathedral, proves, from the archives of the Cathedral, that from 1292 to 1307 he reconstructed and transformed the entire choir, with its aisles, in the Decorated style, as we now see them, and carried on the work which had been begun by his predecessor Bishop Quivil.

[d] See Copy of Ordinance of this Chantry in the Bristol Volume of the Archæoloof that parish, Henry Thomas Ellacombe (at whose instance the account of the executors of the bishop is now printed by the Camden Society in this volume), in making further alterations in the church of Bitton in 1826, discovered a sepulchral slab with the incised effigies of a Crusader bearing the family arms of Bitton[a] (Ermine, a fess gules),[b] with other early sepulchral remains and a stone coffin of rude type, on the SOUTH side of Bitton Church: these, no doubt, were the ancestors of our bishop—one of the ROBERTS (see pedigree).

From foundations and other traces there evidently must have been a transept, the very situation in which it is supposed to have been usual in early times for the founders of churches to have their mortuary chapels. (See a paper by Mr. Lethullier, in Archæologia, vol. ii. p. 292. See also Archæologia, vol. xxii. p. 437, as to these discoveries).

After the foundation of the Chantry of St. Catherine on the NORTH side by our bishop, in the course of years this transept on the SOUTH side would fall into decay—especially as the charge of upholding the new one was to be borne by the family, as by the Ordinance is agreed—and it became hidden and overgrown with grass, till the foundation and contents were discovered in 1826.

The Episcopal Register of Bishop Bitton having perished, little is known of his proceedings. One document, however, exists in the archives at Exeter, which is in such full accordance with the extensive provision made subsequently in his will for masses and prayers for the repose of his soul as to deserve special notice. It is an indulgence of forty days by three archbishops and five bishops, granted at Rome A.D. 1300, and in the sixth year of the Pontificate of Boniface VIII. to all true penitents who should avail themselves gical Institute, 1851, p. 260. It is dated May, 1290. In 1822 a stone coffin was discovered at the foot of the altar-steps. Views of the beautiful triple sedilia are represented in Collings' "Details of Gothic Architecture," vol. ii. pl. 52, 53.

of the bishop's ministry, or pray for his prosperity during his life, or for the repose of his soul after his death, and for the departed souls of his parents, brothers, and sisters. Three of the eight seals attached to this document, those of Basil, Archbishop of Jerusalem, Adenulphus, Archbishop of Cosenza, and Manfred, Bishop of St. Mark's, Venice, are said by Dr. Oliver to have been in fair preservation.

A purchase deed remains in Bishop Bromscombe's register, dated in 1302, which shows that the bishop bought an estate in the parish of St. Alun in Cornwall of William de Roustwick for ten pounds of silver. No reference to this property occurs in the executors' account, nor any other indication of the bishop's possessing any landed estate but the receipt by the executors of 40*s.* for Robert Patrice's admission to land at Farndon, said to be "de feodo Domini," and of 45*s.* for rent at Inwardugh, due during the minority of the heir whose "Maritagium" the bishop had sold to Richard de Merton. Different statements have been made respecting the date of the bishop's death in 1303, but the question is set at rest by the executor's account in which (p. 25) it is distinctly stated that on Thursday 21st of September "Dominus diem suum clausit extremum." He was buried before the lowest step of the high altar in his cathedral, and according to Leland (Itin. vol. iii. p. 57) the gravestone was inscribed "Tho. Bytton, Epis. Exon." All the expenses in making the coffin of lead, digging the grave, providing stone and marble for the tomb, decorating it with tabernacle work, images, and letters in metal, are fully detailed in the executors' account (p. 22). In August 1763 the grave was opened, and its construction found to tally with these statements; the silver chalice also was found (now preserved in the Chapter House at Exeter), which the executors bought to place with the body in the tomb, and for which they paid nine shillings and four pence.[a]

The only relative mentioned in the executors' accounts as having the same name is John de Button: he was married, and to his wife a present was made by the executors of a carriage on four wheels and its harness, valued at ten pounds. Other relations appear to have been considered in the same way. Robert de Gosington, described as the bishop's nephew, had some payments made to him the meaning of which it is difficult to discover; a horse given him, besides 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for "warizona" on taking possession of the Priory of Launceston. The Lady Johanna Maloysel, a canoness of Canonleigh, was a cousin of the bishop; so also were Hugh de Vallibus and Hugh de Hanam. Several members of the Gosinton family, of the Hanams, and the Maloysels had legacies under the will, but it is in the codicil and later documents that the fact of their being of kin to the bishop is mentioned.

It is the peculiar character of the documents contained in this volume that they are official statements of the conduct of the executors in winding up the affairs of two large estates. It was the ordinary practice of executors on obtaining probate of a will to exhibit an inventory of the effects of the deceased with a valuation of them, and also an account of the debts he owed, as well as the debts due to him. Few examples, however, remain of the final release of the executors from their duty by an enrolment of their accounts, a full statement of all their receipts and payments, and the payment of the residue, as in the case of Bishop Bitton, to the parties entitled to it.

Executorship must have been formerly, as now, an office of uncertain duration, as one from which no release could be obtained until all the trusts and directions of the will were fulfilled. We need not therefore be surprised when we discover the time which elapsed between the deaths of the two bishops, and the final settlement of the accounts of their estates by their executors. Bishop Gravesend died in 1303. There is no date upon the roll which contains the compotus exhibited by his executors, but, from the last clause of it in which an appeal is made to the authority of the then Archbishop W. (Walter Reynolds), it is evident that the period at which these proceedings took place could not have been earlier than the end of the year 1313, ten years after the testator's death. The executors of Bishop Button finished their work in three years. The bishop died Sept. 21, 1307, and their account was rendered and concluded at Exeter on the 3rd Dec. 1310.

The result of their labours and of all the particulars contained in this volume will be found in the annexed Abstract of the Executors' Accounts which we have presented in opposite pages; thus enabling a comparison to be made not only between the worldly possessions of the two bishops, but also as to the manner in which they disposed of them by their wills. There was little difficulty in making the abstract of Bishop Bitton's account, the receipts and payments having been distinctly enumerated, and the whole summed up at page 45.

Receipts	5,395	17	$0\frac{3}{4}$
Payments	3,746	3	$5\frac{1}{2}$
Balance	£1,649	13	$7\frac{1}{4}$

The debts due to the Exchequer on the Pipe-roll, amounting to 166*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and which were so violently exacted by the King's treasurer from the Exchequer that no acquittance could be obtained, were doubtless connected with the liberties which the Bishops of London possessed in matters connected with the criminal jurisdiction, and the receipt of fines and amercements in which the bishops had a concurrent right with the King, and had to render account to the Exchequer. In the Rotuli Hundredorum 3 Edw. I. frequent mention is made of these liberties, one of the most remarkable being that the Bishop of London had a prison in Langbourn Ward in the City of London and a part of the custom. These rights remained with the Bishop and are recorded in the Valor Ecclesiasticus, where the bailiffs of the Episcopal Manors are enumerated, and special mention is made of John Chauncy as Bailiff of the liberty of Middlesex, Surrey, and Sussex, and of the payment of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to him for conveying twenty convicted felons to the Bishop's Castle at Stortford.

The arrear of the tenth which was granted to Edward I. by Pope

Nicholas for six years in 1291, though derived from ecclesiastical revenues and collected by persons deputed by the Pope, was also a debt due to the Crown. That the bishop should have been in such arrear, and apparently found to be so by W. de Testa, is somewhat remarkable, but not so remarkable as his having given a bill for a hundred marks to Master Bartholomew, one of the collectors of the tax, from whose executors it passed into the hands of W. de Testa, and was given to William de Balato the surviving collector. The bishop could not have been very regular in his accounts, otherwise he would hardly have remained indebted to the estate of his predecessor John Chishull in 84*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.* during the whole time of his possessing the see, nor probably have been in debt to his successor Radulph de Baldock in the further sum of 60*l.* That he was in the habit of borrowing money and giving bond for its repayment is evident from his debt of 98*l.* to Philip de la Mose, a merchant, of 70*l.* to Henry the King's almoner, 50*l.* to Ralph de Hengham, of 20*l.* to the treasurer of St. Paul's, and 110 marks to Peter Askerne "per diversa scripta obligatoria." Other smaller sums were owing to other persons. Several debts were also due from him to the executors of deceased persons: a demand upon his estate of 5 marks by Henry of Hadham was compounded at 2*s.* and a suit brought against the executors in the King's Court for a debt of 72*l.* determined by the payment of a fine of ten pounds. The whole amount of the debts was 413*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.*

Twelve persons received pensions, among whom was Francis de Trevisa, his proctor in the Curia of Rome, to the amount of 84, and wages to other persons to the extent of 41 includes 10 for different medicines furnished to the deceased by Thomas Rodlond, apothecary. His legacies amounted to 86*l.* 14*s.*; from them we learn that there were twelve minor canons in the cathedral, thirty-two vicars, and thirty-four chaplains celebrating at the altar. He made the usual bequests to the Dominicans, Franciscans, &c. in London, and to some religious houses at Chelmsford, Maldon, and Colchester. From the legacies to his servants we learn that besides his marshal he had seven valets; the number of homines de ministerio and of the gar- ciones is not mentioned, but in the Jakett' Major and Junior we recognize the two pages.

The Bishop of Exeter died owing very much less money than the Bishop of London. He had lent money to others, but he had not borrowed of any; no mention is made of any "obligation." Pensions were due to his officers, several of whom appear to have been connected with the Court of Arches. William de Bruges was employed by him in the court at Rome. John de Leghe was his attorney in the bench, and was paid 4*l.* 0*s.* 7*d.* for his expenses in suits in which the bishop was plaintiff and defendant. There were arrears for tenths imposed by authority of the Pope, and of Peter's Pence, and when we find mention of priors and abbots acting as collectors, and that, as we know, under the authority of the Pope, it is easy to understand how these agencies, attended by profit in the collection of taxes, tended to maintain the Pope's influence throughout the kingdom. Under the head of "debita" the sum of 646*l.* 15*s.* 9¼*d.* for dilapidations, "pro defectibus maneriorum," is included. The sum paid by the executors of Bishop Gravesend in their account was 466*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and the amount was awarded for defects in houses and mills upon the different manors, "per homines piratos." By the custom of the diocese of Exeter 100 oxen were to be left to the succeeding bishop; the value of the oxen was 40*l.* (eight shillings per head). Dr. Oliver, in his "Lives of the Bishops of Exeter," in speaking of the election of Bishop Stapylton as successor to Bishop Button, relates that after the election Richard de Plymstock, Rector of Exminster and Uffedon entered an invidious protest against the proceedings, which occasioned some delay, but which he afterwards withdrew; it appears that the executors reimbursed Bishop Stapylton his expenses in this business, which amounted to 266*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* but on what authority is not easy to understand. This Richard de Plymstock was apparently a contentious man; he was Rector of Uffedon, and in the business of the collation to that church Bishop Button had incurred expenses to the amount of 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* paid by his executors to Thomas de Henton.

The legacies bequeathed by Bishop Button demand our particular attention, as well on account of their amount as the persons and objects to which they were given. In two churches, the cathedral at Exeter and the church of St. Cross, Crediton, trentals were to be celebrated for the soul of the bishop, by the twenty-four vicars of the one church and the sixteen vicars of the other, each vicar receiving a fee of five shillings. By the Masters of Hospitals, that of St. John and St. Mary Magdalene of Bath, of St. Catherine, St. Lawrence, St. Mary Magdalene, and the Nunnery, further trentals were to be celebrated, and anniversaries by the Dominicans and Franciscans at Exeter, and in the Hospitals of St. Mary Magdalene and St. John, in the Cathedral Church of St. Andrew at Wells, by the Dominicans and Franciscans of Cornwall, and the vicars of Frolle and Nymeton, the whole charge being 42*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* The legacies to lepers were to the following thirty-nine places:—

The number of places and persons entitled to legacies under the will and codicil exceeded two hundred, and the amount of them exceeded eighteen hundred pounds. That legacies should be left to the fabrics of St. Cross at Crediton and the church of St. Thomas at Glaseign, as well as to the cathedral at Exeter, was the result of the close connexion of those two churches with the mother-church, the college at Crediton being under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Exeter, and Glaseign being a foundation of a Bishop of Exeter thirty years before. The eight residentiaries were kindly remembered, each receiving a silver dish and saucer (discus cum salsario). Twenty-four religious houses, fraternities, and sisterhoods are enumerated in Devonshire and Cornwall, as well as the Dominicans and Franciscans in both counties. Amongst the poor of every manor belonging to the see various sums were left to be distributed, from 15*l.* to nine shillings. The bishop appears to have had a large family acquaintance: the Lyons family, the husband, wife, and children; the Gosyntons who were relatives; the daughter and sons of Sibyll Gosynton; the Suttons, sons and daughters; the Gews ten in number—nor can we pass without notice the number of married women, the wife of Thomas Trivet, of Henry Littleton, of Adam Walrand, of John de Brummore, of Walter de Stoke, William Fyschwere, of Thomas Wombestrong, of John de Gyvele, of John de Sancto Wynnoco, of John Everard, to whom legacies in money or jewels were given. Neither the bailiffs on the manors nor his executors were forgotten. Every servant of his household, the huntsman, the baker, the chamberlain, the carter, the porter, the gardener, the stud-groom, the shepherd, the cook (though the porter at Exeter forfeited his legacy, having badly kept the bishop's prison,) a legacy of 10*l.* being given to each, Walter de Stapeldon, Thomas de Chutton, John de Button, John de Brueton, Thomas de Henton, Richard de Hache, and Martin de Lucy. Other legacies to the Chutton family show that they were near friends to the bishop, whilst the horse of the value of 20*l.*, the armour, and the family cup bequeathed to John de Button, are evidences of his being the representative of the bishop's family. There were other legacies under a codicil, the legatees being chiefly servants of the household, the boys in the different departments being described as a page of the bakehouse, of the kitchen, of the cook, &c. We learn also from the codicil that the Hanam family were relatives of the bishop, and that besides the legacies to the poor of the manors under the will there was distributed in clothes and shoes to them and to the prisons of Exeter 50*l.*

Following the order of the accounts of the executors, the next topic to which we have to advert is the manorial property of the bishops, and the rents or profits which were due from them and came into the hands of the executors.

The manors of the Bishop of Exeter, twenty-four in number, were in five counties, Cornwall, Devonshire, Sussex, Hampshire, and Surrey. All of them, with one exception (that of Kaergaul), are enumerated in the Valor Ecclesiasticus (?) of Hen. VIII. as then held by the bishop, Gayentes (?) supplying the place of Kaergaul. Of the Devonshire manors we recognise Crediton, Tawton, Punton, Ayshbirton, Nimeton, as held by the Bishops of Exeter at the time of the Exchequer Domesday, and Panton and Berners Lawytton in Cornwall; they with many others had been possessed by the bishops in the Anglo-Saxon times. The manors in the counties of Sussex, Hants, and Surrey appear to have been acquired to the see by Bishop Osbern, and to have been held by him of the Confessor before he became the bishop in the year 1074 under the Conqueror: though a Norman by birth, yet being of kin with the King, he had acquired English habits and was free from the Norman pride. Before he became a bishop he must have been a wealthy ecclesiastic. Every manor was under the charge of a Præpositus, but the manor of Haseleigh was held by the Præpositus to farm (?) It is to be observed that the payments made by the bailiffs are the arrears of the last account, and the fact that at Chudleigh the bailiff paid money before rendering his account, and afterwards made good the arrears, would render it probable that in the course of the year, and prior to the annual account, the bishop might in like manner have received from the bailiffs money, cattle, or produce which were brought into the account. The point is worthy attention, because, if the bishop had previously derived profit from the estates, it would follow that the arrears are really such, and not the payment of the annual rent. The live and dead stock, hay and corn, upon any manor was the personal property of the bishop, subject to charges which we shall notice presently, and was sold by the executors. The value of the live and the dead stock, and of the hay and corn, may be seen in the tables in the Appendix, as well as the number of beasts, sheep, &c. on each manor; but, the amount being entered in gross, we fail to learn the price of beasts or sheep, or the quantities or prices of the corn or hay. Among the farm produce sold are cheese, beer, and skins.

In most of the manors, besides the quantity of hay and corn sold was that which was left after giving to the King and the bishop elect what was necessary for the manor; the entry may be explained by the interval between the bishop's death and the restoration of the temporalities to his successor, from the 25th Sept. 1307 till the 16th March 1308. It is evident from the mention made in the expenses of the executors of payments to the King's chief escheator Sir W. de Gloucester on this side the Trent, to Adam de Medeside the king's sub-escheator in Hants and Surrey, and of five briefs attached in the Exchequer to different escheators, that the escheators held the manors during the vacancy. On the part of the Crown they had profits to receive and duties to perform. Were there any part of the harvest remaining uncut at the time of the bishop's death, the produce would be an escheat and be the property of the Crown. Seed-corn being an implement of the manor, the executors would be bound to supply it both for the winter crops and also for the spring crops sown after the restoration of the temporalities. The teams also, whether of oxen or horses, engaged in ploughing would require hay and straw. Traces of this expenditure occur in the receipts by the executors of 6*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* from the bailiffs of six manors, Tawton, Nymeton, Crediton, Chudleigh, Tungton, and Poyngton, being of the corn which had been issued but not expended during the vacancy of the see, and in the mention (p. 49) made of the bailiffs answering for the "instaurum" retained for the use of the elected bishop.

The manors belonging to the see of London were as numerous as those of the see of Exeter, twenty-four in number, eighteen of them only being enumerated in the Valor Ecclesiasticus. On the vacancy of the see the officers of the escheator seized them as temporalities into the hands of the Crown. Their conduct and dealings with the executors in numerous places is distinctly mentioned. At Fulham, against their will, they applied to their own use four quarters five bushels of oats worth 2*s.* a quarter, but both there and in many other places the escheator himself appears to have been a purchaser of grain, the price of 53 2 at 3*s.* 5*d.* a quarter being 9*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*; and from the same place drove away of his own authority as many as fourteen pigs, and thirty-two smaller ones, worth together 19*s.* 7*d.* At Haringaye he was a buyer, but he also took a considerable quantity of oats, he and his servants consuming also a cask of wine worth 50*s.* and hay of 24*s.* for their horses. At Southminster the escheator not only bought as usual grain to the extent of many quarters and fed his horses with oats, but took possession of two swans worth 5*s.* and four peacocks worth 6*d.* each. The sub-escheator was Henry of Gloucester. From Clakestone also he took a cart-horse worth 1*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* which he did not restore. We must not pass by without notice a payment of 40*l.* to the escheator for lodging and feeding the beasts belonging to the deceased bishop from the Conception of the B. V. to the Translation of St. Thomas (Dec. 8—July 7), the profit of the land during that time belonging to the king. Temp. Rest. June 1.

The executors everywhere account for the value of grain sold, whether to the escheator or others, and also require allowance for the waste committed by them.

Ralph de Baldock, the successor of Gravesend, was elected January 13th, and, though the temporalities were not restored till June 1st, he appears to have had an interest in the management and culture of the manorial estates. Bishop Gravesend died Dec. 8, but he left 37 acres sown with wheat at Fulham, 22 at Gillinge, 92 at Wrinholte, 85 of siligo at Fulham and 112 at Gillinge, and 35 of meslin; the wheat-sown land being sold at 2*s.* 8*d.*, the siligo at 3*s.* and 2*s.* 4*d.*, and the meslin at 2*s.* 4*d.* per acre. The outgoing tenant of a manor was bound to leave a certain quantity of stock, according to the custom. The bishop elect received from his successor at Fulham four cart houses, three nags, 26 "stotti" (?), 40 oxen, a boar and six sows, and a brass pot.

At Haringay the bailiff of the elect bishop was keeping house, and bought of the executors four quarters of meslin at 3*s.* 4*d.* per quarter, for the feeding of the family, "ad uberationem famulorum." The like was done by the bailiff at Sunbury, but the price paid by the bishop elect for ploughing and sowing was 1*s.* 11*d* only for wheat, 1*s.* 8*d.* for meslin, and 1*s.* 4*d.* for the siligo. In three districts of Southminster, Eylond, Plumberwe, and Bradeworthe, 257 acres were sown with wheat, at the rate of three bushels to the acre, and the value of wheat at that time being 4*s.* per quarter, 6*d.* per bushel was the price paid for the sowing. On this manor the live stock delivered to the bishop's successor, as the "implementum," consisted of 36 horses of various kinds, 24 oxen, 136 muttons, 42 wethers, 1,363 ewes worth twelve pence each, the whole value being 106*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.*, besides one brazen pot worth 6*s.*

We must now revert to the receipts of Bishop Button's executors, which follow the manorial rents, and the sale of produce and stock, no similar items occurring in the accounts of Bishop Gravesend.

The business of the ecclesiastical courts was a source of revenue to the bishops, which, during the vacancy of a see, when the temporalities or lands and manors passed into the custody of the Crown, passed into the custody of the archbishop of the province as spiritualities. Frequent mention is made of these revenues under this description in the Valor Ecclesiasticus of Henry VIII. The annual value of them, as received by the Bishop of Bath and Wells, and derived from institutions, confirmations, consecrations, procurations, visitations, wills, and testaments, was estimated at 40*l.* The Bishop of Exeter had from the same sources more than 80*l.*, being perquisites of the consistory court, fees for confirmation and inductions of abbots and priors, profits of vacant churches, &c. A heavy arrear was due from Sir Thomas Harpetre, Bishop Button's receiver in his ecclesiastical court at Exeter, of all but 1,200*l.*, and as much as 75*l.* from Walter de Epe on account of the bishop's peculiar jurisdiction. There were times when all the inferior courts of the dioceses, archidiaconal and prebendal, being inhibited the exercise of the testamentary jurisdiction, the profits of the bishop's courts might have amounted to this great sum, the whole of that jurisdiction being in the hands of the bishop. We must note also the large sums in the hands of the bishop's clerk of expenses, 42*l.* from Richard de Brayelegh, the clerk at the time of the bishop's death, and 218*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* in the hands of his predecessor.

The bishop's receiver and clerk of his expenses would appear to have acted as his bankers, and to have lent money to his friends: the names of the persons so indebted for moneys advanced may be read at pp. 20, 21. Several of them seem to have been persons of distinction, knights, peers, and archdeacons, and four members of one family, the De Chuttons, one of whom was a canon of Wells, had borrowed sums amounting to seventy pounds.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Robert Winchelsey, and the Bishop of Bath and Wells, Walter Haselshaw, had also borrowed respectively 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and 33*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*—the one a hundred, the other fifty marks. A single trace occurs of Bishop Button holding land in his own right, and independently of his bishopric, and as lord of a manor, in the money received for the maritagium of a ward, William de Fyschwere, and the receipt of rent from the lands of the ward at Inewardlegh of fifteen pounds a quarter; the forty shillings also paid by Robert Patrica for entry upon land at Farndon, de fundo Domini, indicates tenure of land.

The expense of the funeral was 142*l.* 16*s.* 5½*d.* The corpse was cleaned and attired by Robert de Tonson the surgeon, his fee being half a mark. The bishop dying at Clist,[a] a village five miles west of Exeter, the three days before the funeral alms in bread to the amount of 49*s.* 4*d.* were distributed, and psalters rehearsed by the clerks, and a solemn mass celebrated, the oblation at which was 13*d.* At Exeter the carpenters prepared the bier and the hearse with Judas' pieces of iron to carry the wax candles, which were carried on boards from Clist, 424¾ lb., being of the value of 14*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.* The coffin was of lead, the tomb of stone with a marble slab, images, tabernacle work, and letters of metal. One chalice of silver to place in the tomb with the body. On the vigil of the funeral psalters were rehearsed, the bell of the cathedral and of the thirty-four churches of the city were tolled, and high mass was said. Pittances were given to four religious houses, the Dominicans, Franciscans, the sisters and poor of the Hospital of St. John, and the lepers of St. Mary Magdalene. There were 235 prisoners in the King's prison, who received each a penny, amongst them being twelve clerks, who received a shilling each; three clerks imprisoned in the Bishop's Court had 2*d.* Sixteen canons present on the day of the burial, the twenty-four vicars and two clerks of the Exeter quire, 2*s.*; the thirty anniversary priests of the cathedral, and one hundred and two secular priests of the Convent of Bodmin, had each one shilling; the fourteen choristers had six pence. Ten thousand two hundred and twelve poor persons received each one penny on the day of the burial, and on the day of the month's mind more than six thousand —all the members of the church, canons, vicars, choristers, priests, &c. in attendance receiving fees. At Wells, Crediton, Glasnye, similar offices were performed. The funeral of the bishop was attended by a brother bishop, John de Monmouth, who had come to see him, and after the funeral returned home; the executors however reimbursed the bishop his expenses coming and going, which amounted to 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and gave gratuities to each member of his suite, which consisted of twenty six persons—three clerks, four esquires, two valets in office, two palfry-men, twelve garciones, and three pages. There is much similarity in the account of the funeral of Bishop Gravesend—though the weight of wax provided from the hearse in St. Paul's was treble (1200 lb.) that at Exeter—the payments to the attendants at the funeral, the cost of the slab for the tomb, and the repairing of the pavement, the surgeon's charge for the dressing the corpse; the dole of a penny to each poor person (amounting to 151*l.* 4*s.*) being given to 36,288 persons. St. Paul's was the only church in which masses were said and the obsequies of the bishop celebrated, but provision was made by his will for payment to all the members of the church at the funeral, and for the perpetual celebration of his anniversary and the payment of a chantry priest. Provision was made under the will of Bishop Button for anniversaries and trentals to be celebrated at Exeter, Crediton, by the Master of the Hospital of St. John and St. Mary Magdalene at Bath, by the Masters of St. Catherine, St. Lawrence, Mary Magdalene, and the nuns at Bristol, by the Dominicans and Franciscans at Exeter, at the Hospital of Mary Magdalene at Exeter, in the cathedral at Wells, by the Dominicans and Franciscans in Cornwall, by the vicar of Froille, and the vicar of Nymeton. Legacies were left by Bishop Gravesend, according to the custom of the age, to the Dominicans and Franciscans, the brethren of Mount Carmel, of Saint Augustin, and of the Sack, to the Dominicans at Chelmsford, the brethren of Carmel at Malton, and the Franciscans at Colchester, without any special obligation.

[a] The house is now called Bishop's Court; the present possessor, John Garratt, Esq. has lately restored the desecrated chapel and fitted it for domestic services.

The household of Bishop Button appears to have been kept up for nine weeks after his death for the convenience of the executors, who were Thomas de Henton and R. de Hacche, the latter filling also the office of clerk of expenses in the household. The whole expenditure, which included the entertainment on the day of the funeral, amounted to 99*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* Altogether seven casks and a half were consumed, three of them at the funeral. The provisions were out of the bishop's stores. The fifteen oxen provided from the larder were probably fresh meat, the carcossiis, bacones, salted, and the congers and hakes pickled or dried. Gingerbread and pyonad came from the groceries in the garderoba. The stable supplied horse-shoes and nails for the executors and the families, as it may be supposed, the horses being fresh shod before they commenced their progress; forty-four shoes were used and 280 nails, and the sum charged for them was 2*s.* 2*d.*

The household of Bishop Gravesend was similarly maintained, but for a short period, from the 9th December to the 2nd January. Two days after the funeral the number seems to have been much diminished, the daily expenditure averaging about 6*s.*, which previously had been three times as much. At the funeral dinner there was expended for swans, fowls, and rabbits, 13*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*; for saffron, gingerbread, sugar, and spices, bought of a grocer hypothecarer, 4*l.* 17*s.* The bread, beer, wine, meat, and other things, were furnished from the bishop's stock. For nine weeks and four days after the 1st January thirteen stablemen were employed in charge of the twenty-two horses of the bishop at Stepney, their wages being three halfpence a-day. When they were at Fulham twenty-five shillings were expended in hay. The horses were probably employed in the service of the executors and their journeyings to the various manors.

The probate of the wills of deceased bishops is the prerogative of the archbishop of the province. Bishop Gravesend died on the 9th of December; on the 20th the executors, I. de Bedford, Archdeacon of London, Richard Newport, Archdeacon of Middlesex, and Stephen Gravesend, Rector of Stepney (the Dean of St. Paul's, the other executor, not appearing), proved the will at South Malling, before Robert de Winchelsey, Archbishop of Canterbury, the cost of the proceeding and of the journey being 5*l.* Bishop Button died four years later, in 1307. At that time the archbishop, having fallen into disgrace with Edward I. at the close of the year 1305, was at Rome, there to be judged by the pope for his misconduct to the King. All the estates of the archbishop were seized into the King's hands, but the spiritualities were seized by the pope, and when the executors of the bishop came to London they then proved the will before William de Testa, who is described as being appointed custos of the archbishoprick to the pope. The expense of their journey was 18*l.* 5*s.* 11*d.* The fee paid to W. de Testa for his expediting the business, and for the wages of his clerks, was 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* Of this W. de Testa mention is made in the accounts of the executors of Bishop Gravesend, his clerk giving an acquittance for the payment of tenths imposed by Nicholas IV., of the arrears of which W. de Testa had been appointed collector. His name also occurs as one of the nuncios sent by Clement into England for the management of the pope's affairs, in the absence of the archbishop. He was appointed in 1317 one of the collectors of first-fruits of vacant benefices in England, and, although the temporalities of the archbishop were then in the hands of the Crown, the King so far gave way, in the exercise of his prerogative, in favour of the pope, that, by letter, Sept. 7, 1308, though at the same time he declared the temporalities to belong to him in right of his Crown, he granted them to the pope, and directed the guardian of the temporalities to render an account to the pope.

Bishop Gravesend's Debts.—1303.

The debts due from the estate of Bishop Gravesend, and paid by his executors (exclusive of dilapidations), were very nearly 1,200*l.* An examination of the different nature of the debts may throw some light upon the state of society, the custom of borrowing and lending, as well as upon the conduct and feelings of the individual so dying in debt.

The first debts were those due to the Crown. There was an arrear of 1*l.* 7*s.* 6¾*d.* due on account of a fifteenth imposed in the reign of Edw. I., but which was demanded of the executors in the reign of Edw. II. (1307). A parliament had been held at Lincoln Jan. 20, 1301, in which a fifteenth had been granted to the King; fifteenths had also been granted in 1290 and in 1291. The decima triennalis, mentioned as exacted after the bishop's death, and amounting to 300*l.*, was probably that of which notice occurs in Rot. Parl. i. 243, as granted to Pope Boniface IV., who was pope from 1294-1303, and died in the same year with the bishop. The payment to the sheriff of Essex of queen-gold (3*l.* 14*s.* 0*d.*) for the barony of Stortford, must have been paid to Edward the First's second queen, who was married to him in 1299. When a fine was paid to the Exchequer for any grant, a sum equal to one-tenth of the fine was due to the queen as queen-gold. In the Rot. Parl. i. 299 (8 Edw. II. 134), mention is made of a demand for queen-gold from the prior of St. John of Jerusalem. The transaction upon which the demand for queen-gold was made had occurred in the time of Edw. I., and the matter was respited until the barons of the exchequer should determine whether the queen had a right to the gold or not.

Probate of the Wills. BISHOP BUTTON, 21 Sept. 1307.

The probate of the wills of deceased bishops belongs by prerogative to the archbishops. At that time the Archbishop Winchelsey being in disgrace with the King and under citation to appear before the papal court, two persons had been empowered by a bull from Pope Clement to administer the spiritualities of the church. This circumstance explains what is stated, that the will was proved by William Testa, constituted by the pope guardian of the archbishoprick of Canterbury. The cost of a present to this W. de Testa for his expediting the business, with payments to his clerks for writing and sealing the documents, was 5*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.*

The will of BISHOP GRAVESEND, who died Dec. 9, 1303, was proved before the archbishop at South Malling on the 20th of the same month, by the executors John de Bedford, Archdeacon of London, Richard Newport, Archdeacon of Middlesex, and Stephen Gravesend, Rector of Stepheneth; the other executor Ralph de Baldock, Dean of St. Paul's, was not present. They were sworn to exhibit the inventory which forms so material a part in this volume. The probate act, at p. 115, contained a notification of the interlinear correction made in the original will. The expense of the journey of the executors to South Malling and of the probate was 5*l.* The family of the bishop continued at Fulham until the first day of the year. The inventory seems to have been exhibited to the archbishop at South Malling (p. 102), and to have been the work of sixteen days (p. 101), but the whole account was not made up for at least ten years, nor until Walter Reynolds had succeeded to the archbishopric in 1314. The executors solicit (?) the aid of the archbishop in the recovery of a debt due from his predecessor to the estate of Bishop Gravesend, or to be allowed the amount of that debt, 44*l.* for cattle sold to him in several manors.

The number of horses belonging to the bishop, apart from those upon the manors, was twenty-seven: five of them were accounted for separately, four being given away as presents, but the remaining twenty-two were kept at Stepney for nine weeks and four days from the beginning of the year. They were tended by thirteen grooms, whose wages were three half-pence per day, whilst that of the farrier was two pence; nine and three pence was also paid to the seneschal for shoes for the said horses, sold by him to the executors. The executors' expenses were interesting and various. Many were their journeys to and fro by boat from London to Westminster upon pleas affecting them both in the Exchequer and King's Bench. Messengers also were sent to divers places, even to the archbishop in Norfolk, for expediting the business of the deceased in his courts. One set of persons were to be sent to sell the stock upon the manors, others to estimate dilapidations, to value the grain, and deliver the implements to the bishop's successor. It occupied the auditors of the accounts and their clerks ten weeks to make up the account, and their expenses exceeded two pounds per week. Mention is made of 30*l.* received by the executors for eight sacks of wool, the produce of all the sheep sold, after shearing, throughout the whole bishoprick. The cost of the sacks for the wool, the expense of shearing and washing the sheep, of attending to the business and bringing the wool to London, and the price of the canvas-bag to hold money, are all detailed. The executors had to pay 300*l.* to the King at the Exchequer. To the person who counted the money a fee was given, which, together with the money rejected, was 4*s.* 2*d.* Twelve pence was paid for burnishing silver dishes bequeathed and given, and 2*s.* to the goldsmith who weighed the plate. The executors were troubled with lawsuits, the most expensive of which appears to have been the defending a suit against Simon de Camera, upon which was expended 4*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* The nature of the debts which were liquidated by the executors was various, public as well as private. In the first class we may enumerate taxes, temporal and spiritual, unpaid. The bishop had died in 1303, in the 32 Edw. I., and this account was completed not earlier than 1313, when Walter Reynolds was Archbishop of Canterbury; but there was an arrear of 27*s.* 6¾*d.* for fifteenths unpaid in the time of Edw. I. and a three-years' tenth amounting to 300*s.* had been exacted after the bishop's death, and queen's gold for the barony of Stortford (74) was paid to the sheriff of Essex, and the bishop was found in debt in the Pipe to the Exchequer in 166*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* which the King's treasurer levied from the Archdeacon of London, one of the executors, and for which the archdeacon could not get an acquittance through the ill-temper of the treasurer. The bishop was also in arrear for six years' tenths imposed by Pope Nicholas IV. who had died in 1292, and of which it would seem that he had been the collector in conjunction with one Bartholomew, to whom it was afterwards found the bishop had given a bill for 100 marks, and which Bartholomew's executors had made over to one William de Balato. It appears also that the bishop, having held the see for 24 years, was indebted to the estate of his predecessor, John de Chishull, in the sum of 84*l.* 16*s.* This money was paid to his successor, Ralph de Baldock, together with another sum due to Bishop Baldock which was paid by the sacristan of the cathedral.

The amount of the dilapidations on the manors was 466*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* valued by sworn appraisers. Some of the personal debts are curious; to one Scot, a fishmonger, for fish, 33*s.* 7*d.*; to a needlewoman for making a carpet, 40*s.*; to Reginald de Barbier, a corn merchant, 10*l.* The Willielmus de Hancia, to whom 15*s.* 8*d.* was "pro tonsione et cissura pannorum," was probably not a tailor, but a clothworker. The bishop also would appear to have borrowed money, and to have given some obligation; thus 98*l.* was due to Philip la Mose, a merchant, and 50*l.* to Ralph de Hingham, and 70*l.* to the King's almoner. The claim of 72*l* for which an action was brought against the executors by Simon de Camera above-mentioned was settled by a fine of 6*d.* The whole amount of the debts was 413*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.* Pensions also were due to certain persons to the extent of 64 (?) But, except the pension to Mr. Francis de Trebys, the bishop's proctor at the court of Rome, it does not distinctly appear for what service these pensions were paid. It would seem as if the bishop had much to do in various monetary transactions, and had many running accounts. In the collection of tenths, probably those due to the pope, there was found due to William de Malden, for service in respect of three several tenths, ten marks, eight marks, and a hundred shillings. There was due also to William de Cotyngham, the bishop's proctor and attorney-at-law, in various suits, on account of his salary, 8*l.*; to Thomas Rodland, the apothecary, for divers medicaments, 10*s.*; to the baker, for his shoe-money and wages; to Mr Johano as the cook; and it is to be remarked that when the servants were paid their wages the sum was for three-quarters of a year.

The legacies in money were not numerous. The legatees were the fabric, the twelve minor canons, the thirty-two vicars, the thirty-four chaplains, the children of the almonry, and other servants, eight religious houses in London and elsewhere, his seven valets and servants, the butler, the baker, the barber, the chamberlain, the garciones, and to the greater jaket and the lesser jaket, apparently the chief valets, twenty shillings each. The bishop had also left a legacy of twelve pence to every parochial chaplain in the diocese, but of this legacy no other notice is taken in the account but as remaining to be paid.

The inventory of articles found in the Camera of Bishop Button includes clothing, bedding, furniture, linen, and many moveables not found in the inventories Robæ, Lectualia, et Tapeta of Bishop Gravesend. The articles of dress mentioned are the tunic, super-tunic, cloaks, robe, capucium, mantel, corsets, follingers, capelli, pillie gorger. How the super-tunic, cloak, and robe differed from each other in shape might be difficult to discover, but it would seem from the description of Bishop Gravesend's super-tunics that to each of them there belonged a "mantel" or "hood." It is remarkable also that, though "robæ" is the heading of the inventory of Bishop Gravesend's clothing, no robe is described; but, whether it were robe, cloak, or super-tunic, furs appear almost without exception to have belonged to each, the dress or the hood being furred. The dresses were of various materials. Bishop Button had several kinds of covering for the head, one being a cap with a feather, but the capucium and mantel alone appear as used by Bishop Gravesend. From both the inventories we learn the prices of various articles of cloth and linen, whilst in that of Bishop Button it appears that his clerks and grooms had their different suits. The furniture for the beds is accurately described; but, if "lectum" be what we now term a bedstead, no mention is made of one as belonging to Bishop Gravesend, and Bishop Button had only two, one of which, used commonly by himself, together with his personal clothing, was given to his chamberlain. We may remark, that, though pillows are mentioned, there are no beds, the lectualia, or furniture for bedding, consisting of coverlids of various colours, some of them furred, sheets, and blankets. In Bishop Gravesend's inventory no mention is made of what we should call "furniture," tables and chairs, but only of carpeting for covering benches, and, besides a chair or two, one white, and another with different colours, with bosses, the furniture in Bishop Button's consisted chiefly of chests and boxes, a spice and a candle box, a chess-board and men (ganulia), besides other things too numerous to be here enumerated.

The garderoba of Bishop Button was filled with spices and grocery, that of Bishop Gravesend with books; the lists of the spices and books, with the prices, will be found in the Appendix. Each bishop had his buttery and his kitchen, but the executors of Bishop Gravesend derived little from their contents, the cook and the butler claiming the utensils as their fee. The description of the contents of the pantry of Bishop Button may be interesting, not only on account of the quantity of the napery, but for the various kinds of cloth, and their different values. Bishop Gravesend had 27 horses, his carriages were three in number, a carrus for five horses, which, with its furniture, sold for 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, a long careda, and two short ones, which, with their furniture, sold for 1*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.* The carrus of Bishop Button, on four wheels, with its furniture, was valued at 10*l.*, and given by the executors to the wife of Sir John Button.

The executors of the will were Walter de Stapledon, Thomas de Chutton, John de Button, Thomas de Horton, Richard de Hacoke, and Galfridus de Lucy, and they received each a legacy of 10*l.* Of these Walter de Stapledon was the successor of the bishop in the see; he had also bequeathed to him in the will a palfrey of the value of 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and a cup of the value of 3*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* Thomas de Chutton appears also to have been an intimate friend, his name occurring in the list of those who had moneys in their hands "ex accomodato Domini," and to the extent of twenty pounds (p. 20), and having bequeathed to him a diamond ring 26*s.* 8*d.* in value, a cup worth 5*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*, besides twenty pounds in money. He was also entrusted under the will with certain books, a Bible and Book of the Sentences (Peter Combaidi), for the use of one William Littleton in the event of his becoming a student in theology.

The Lord (Dominus) Sir John de Button appears to have been the representative of the bishop's family. A horse of the value of 20*l.* was his legacy, together with all the bishop's armour, and a cup called "Hulle," of which the executors did not take possession, as being an heirloom belonging to the family of Button. Thomas de Henton had also a legacy of twenty pounds. It would seem that he and Richard de Hacoke bore the chief labour in the conduct of the executorship (pp. 25-37). They appear to have been men of business with the bishop, Richard Hacoke having been the clerk of the expenses of the bishop's household, and having in his hands moneys belonging to the bishop of some amount (p. 20).

In the matter of the collation to the church of Ufculm, Thomas de Henton had to receive from the bishop's executors 16*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* and Robert de Hacche 5*l.* for the purchase of certain goods from the marriage of Joan de Holbroke. That Geoffrey de Lucy, who received 5*l.* for the profits of the church at Chiltern, in the occupation of the Bishop, was also active in the business of the executorship appears from what is stated of his journey to London to obtain briefs from the Exchequer, and his journey from Cornwall to Exeter in distributing the bishop's legacies and selling the live and dead stock upon the manors (p. 37).

The will of Bishop Richard de Gravesend, which follows at p. 111, from the account of his executors, was made at Hornsey 12 Sept. 1302, a year before his death on the 9th Dec. 1303.

It would be out of place to notice his character otherwise than as it may be drawn from the contents of the will; but it seems worthy of remark that to Jesus Christ alone as the Redeemer and Saviour he commends his soul, without any reference to the Blessed Virgin and the Saints; and that the only provision made for celebration on his behalf was that of an obit on the anniversary of his death, for which a rent-charge of the value of 10*l.* was to be purchased; six marks or 4*l.* to be apportioned to the chaplain, and the remainder to be distributed amongst the members of the church. No mention being made of the purchase in the executors' account, we conclude that it was completed by the bishop, in the year which elapsed between the making the will and his death. The direction for his burial by the side of Bishop Sandwich, his predecessor, and to whom he ascribes his advancement, is a token of affectionate gratitude. The comparatively small sum devoted to this purpose is a striking contrast with the provision made both in his lifetime and his will by his contemporary the Bishop of Exeter for anniversaries and trentals in several places, and by divers orders. There is a tone of kindness in his remitting by his will his brother Stephen's debt; in the legacy of a better Bible to his nephew, Stephen's son; and there is something touching in his appeal to his lord and friend the archbishop, "quem humiliter rogo ex debito gratitudinis, tam societatis antiquæ quam communis patriæ," to undertake to be the superior of his executors; in the legacy to Stephen's wife of the robes and bedding and table linen, and the hundred marks to him towards his daughter's portion "pro aluma filiâ suâ consulenda." Seven-and-twenty pounds was to be the sum distributed to the poor at his funeral, or more, at the discretion of the executors, and payments to each class of the members of the church. For the adorning of the high altar he gave a silver-gilt cup. To the archbishop his ruby ring, and two silver dishes which had been made for him at Paris. To six of his friends silver cups, to others a piece of plate. Twelve pence to every parochial chaplain in the diocese. To the fabric of St. Paul's 100 marks. The will was proved before the archbishop in person at South Malling by the executors, John de Bedford, Archdeacon of London, Richard de Newport, Archdeacon of Middlesex, and Stephen de Gravesend, Rector of Stebbenheth; the other executor, the Dean of St. Paul's, Ralph de Baldock, was absent. The legacies to his executors were, a better silver cup to the Dean, a silver cup to the Archdeacon of London, and a par decretorum to the Archdeacon of Colchester, which he had bought of W. de Montford's executors.

But to discover how the account of Bishop Gravesend's executors stood was not so easy a task, deductions being everywhere made from the receipts, and no totals either of the receipts or payments being stated. At p. 99 the words "Summa summarum omnium maneriorum," but there are no figures; and also at p. 110 no figures follow the "Summa" with which the roll concludes. Bishop Gravesend had calculated that he was possessed of property to the amount of two thousand marks; it turned out that he was possessed of more than as many pounds; but his debts and legacies and funeral expenses absorbed it all, and the executors had but a little in hand apparently to pay outstanding demands. To the estate of the Bishop of Exeter the Dean and Chapter were the residuary legatees, and to them was paid the large sum of 600*l.* It is commonly asserted that at the time when these bishops lived, the beginning of the fourteenth century, money was fifteen times as valuable as it now is. It would ill become me to call in question the truth of this opinion, but it may serve to throw some light upon the subject if I state, not what was the value, but the quantity, of the money which came into the hands of the executors, as found in the treasury of the bishops. The sums stated are 1,030*l.* and 148*l.* It is to be observed that the pound and the shilling were then only moneys of account, and that the only coin was the silver penny, and from what is stated in Folke's Table of English Silver Coins we learn that of the Tower pound, of 5,400 grains (which was three-quarters of an ounce lighter than the Troy pound), there were coined 243 pence, each penny weighing somewhat less than 22¼ grains, and hence 240 pennies of full weight, making twenty shillings or a pound sterling in tale, contained as much silver as fifty-seven shillings and five pence of our present coin. According to the tables in Clark's Roman, Saxon, and English Coins, the shilling of Edward the First was worth two shillings and tenpence farthing.

We shall therefore not greatly err if we multiply the above sums by three, and estimate the bullion in the two Thesauria of the bishops as equal to 3,090*l.* and 444*l.* of our present money. As respects the comparative value of silver bullion, and of wheat, a simple illustration may be given in the statement that four shillings being the highest price allowed for a quarter of wheat by Bishop Gravesend's executors, the pound of bullion was equal to five quarters; but, when wheat is in our time 66*s.* per quarter, the pound of bullion is equal only to one.

The reader will find in the Appendix abstracts of the executors' accounts, where I have made some annotations upon them, following the order in which the receipts and payments are given, as most convenient for reference, and preventing any point worthy of notice from being overlooked.

THE WILL OF
RICHARD DE GRAVESEND, BISHOP OF LONDON, 1302.

In nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti Amen. Anno Domini Millesimo trescentesimo secundo Pridie idus Septembris apud Haryngeye Ego Ricardus Londoniensis ecclesiæ minister indignus testamentum meum condo et facio sub hac forma. In primis tibi O pie Redemptor et potens Salvator animarum, domine Jehsu Christe, animam meam commendo, Tibi etiam O summe Sacerdos et vere Pontifex animarum commendo universam plebem Londoniensis civitatis et diocesis; obsecrans te per medicinam vulnerum tuorum, quæ in cruce pependit, ut michi et ipsis, concessa perfecta venia peccatorum, concedas nos ad tuam misericordiam pervenire, et frui beatitudine tuis electis perhenniter repromissa. Do, lego etiam corpus meum ad sepeliendum in ecclesia Sancti Pauli Londoniæ juxta tumbam piæ recordationis domini Henrici de Sandwyco [a] promotoris mei, ita ut coequetur marmor superpositum pavimento, si me juxta ecclesiam mori contigerit. Si autem longe ab ecclesia, tunc in proximiori ecclesia conventuali eligo sepulturam. Pro usu terrenorum peto veniam mundi Creatoris: ut michi retentio eorum peccatum non augeat, sed sint adminiculum promerendæ salutis. Ita quod sicut nunc æstimo bona terrena quæ ad me pertinent, tam in libris, quam suppellectili, equis, bobis, vaccis, cum ovibus et cæteris pecoribus, cum bladis in horreis, et lanis, ac etiam aliis mobilibus, et cum nominibus debitorum, quæ se extendunt ad trescentas libras sterlingorum, excepto debito in quo germanus meus dominus Stephanus de Gravesende michi tenetur, quod quidem debitum universum remitto et quietum clamo sibi et hæredibus suis in perpetuum,

[a] Henry de Sandwich, Bishop of London 1262-1273. His name and that of Richard de Gravesend are mentioned together by Dugdale, History of St. Paul's Cathedral, p. 45, as amongst those whose monumental stones were destroyed in the reign of Edward VI. or early in that of Elizabeth.

æstimari possunt ad valentiam duarum milium marcarum, de quibus sic condo testamentum: In primo solvantur debita mea quæ talia sunt, Domino Papæ per manus Magistri Bartholomæi de Ferentino trescentas libras. Item domino Radulpho de Hengham quinquaginta libras. Domino Henrico Elemosinario domini . . Regis quaterviginti marcas. Item, executoribus prædecessoris mei circiter quadraginta libras; et si sint alia minuta debita, suas habeant probationes et declarationes. Item do lego die sepulturæ meæ pro exequiis faciendis et in errogatione pauperum septem viginti libras vel amplius prout executoribus meis videbitur expediens et honestum. Item uniquique canonico majori residenti dimidiam marcam. Item unicuique minorum canonicorum quinque solidos. Item singulis vicariis tres solidos. Item singulis capellanis in ecclesia duos solidos. Item pueris elemosinariis et aliis ministris et servientibus ecclesiæ viginti solidos. Item do lego unam crucem argenteam deauratam ecclesiæ Sancti Pauli Londoniæ ad ornatum majoris altaris in perpetuum, et est ponderis decem marcarum ut æstimo. Item do lego domino meo domino Cantuariensi Archiepiscopo[a] unum anulum qui fuit domini mei, scilicet cum uno ruby; et duas pelves argenteas ponderis decem librarum quas fieri feci Parisiis; rogans eum et obsecrans quatinus ex debito gratitudinis regulet et juvet executores meos in suis agendis, et præcipue in bonis quæ fuerunt domini W. de Luda Eliensis Episcopi[b] cujus fui executor. Item, magistro Radulpho de Baudak[c] Decano Sancti Pauli unam cupam argenteam meliorem. Item magistro J. de Bedeford Archidiacono Londoniæ unam cupam argenteam. Item magistro Ricardo de Neuport Archidiacono Colecestriæ Officiali nostro unum par decretorum, quod emi de executoribus magistri W. de Monteforti quondam Decani Sancti Pauli Londoniæ.[d] Item, domino Stephano Gravesende germano meo omnes armaturas quæ sunt in garderoba mea. Item, magistro Stephano

Item do lego Novæ fabricæ ecclesiæ Sancti Pauli Londoniæ quadraginta marcas una cum sexaginta marcis quas habuerunt de sequestro meo in Archidiaconatu Essexiæ, et volo quod ista legata computentur in promissione mea facta prius ad dictam fabricam. Volo etiam quod annuus redditus decem librarum ematur in civitate Londoniæ pro anniversario meo faciendo, si de eo me superstite non sit provisum, ita videlicet ordinandum. In primo pro uno capellano pro me in perpetuum in Ecclesia Sancti Pauli celebrante sex marcæ annuatim percipiendæ. Canonicis majoribus servitio die anniversarii mei præsentibus sexaginta solidi, minoribus canonicis viginti solidi, vicariis triginta solidi, et cæteris ministris et servientibus ecclesiæ decem solidi; et sic singulis annis in perpetuum. Item volo quod unus liber duorum Ewangeliorum glosatus glosis fratris Thomæ de Ak' restituatur ecclesiæ Lyncolniensi. Item fratribus prædicatoribus Londoniæ quadraginta solidos. Item fratribus minoribus ejusdem civitatis quadraginta solidos. Item fratribus de Monte Carmeli ejusdem civitatis quadraginta solidos. Item fratribus Sancti Augustini Londoniæ viginti solidos. Item fratribus de Sakko ejusdem civitatis decem solidos. Item fratribus prædicatoribus de Chelmeresford viginti solidos. Item fratribus de Monte Carmeli de Maldone viginti solidos. Et fratribus minoribus de Colecestria viginti solidos. Item Ricardo Marescallo meo quadraginta solidos. Item lego Ricardo Filloil valecto meo quadraginta solidos. Item Ricardo de Gravesende nepoti meo quadraginta solidos. Item lego cæteris valectis meis unicuique eorum unam marcam. Item volo quod statim ante exhumationem meam emantur panni et induantur valecti mei. Item lego hominibus meis de ministerio decem libras. Item lego ultra prius legata Waltero Lithfot de Botelria unam marcam. Item Rogero de Panetria decem solidos. Item Rogero Strik' dimidiam marcam. Et Willielmo Barbitonsori dimidiam marcam. Item lego garcionibus meis decem libras qui omnes singulis annis sua habebant stipendia. Item lego ultra prius legata majori Jaket viginti solidos. Item minori Jaket de Camera viginti solidos. Item volo quod singuli de familia mea ultra id quod est eis legatum, si facultas affuerit, curialiter respiciantur pro tempore quo deservierint. Item, Johanni Tany de Camera quadraginta solidos. Item domino Johanni de Littlintone Rectori ecclesiæ de Gillinge unam cupam argenteam. Item Thomæ de Kent unam peciam argenti. Willielmo de Marisco Rectori ecclesiæ de Fairstede unam peciam argenti. Item, Johanni de Stebbenhethe clerico nostro unam peciam argenti.[a] Item, Jolano coco meo quadraginta solidos. Item Johanni de Stebbenethe clerico meo unum ciphum de mazero cum pede argentea. Item pauperibus de Meltone et Gravesende lego decem libras. Ad quæ omnia facienda executores meos facio et constituo magistros Radulphum de Baudak' Decanum ecclesiæ Sancti Pauli Londoniæ, Johannem de Bedeford Archidiaconum Londoniæ, Ricardum de Neuport Archidiaconum Colecestriæ, et Stephanum de Gravesende Rectorem ecclesiæ de Stebbenhethe nepotem meum. Et volo quod executores mei prædicti administrent in bonis meis in omnibus et per omnia secundum dispositionem domini et amici mei domini Roberti Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi totius Angliæ Primatis, quem humiliter rogo ex debito gratitudinis tam societatis antiquæ quam communis patriæ, ut in se suscipiat istud onus, Rogans insuper et obsecrans dictum dominum et alios executores meos prædictos per aspersionem sanguinis Jhesu Christi ut tales sint dispensatores bonorum meorum, quales vellent vel velle deberent habere suorum. In cujus rei testimonium sigillum meum præsentibus est appensum. Datum et actum apud Haringeye prædictam die et anno supradictis. The articles of plate mentioned in these inventories of the nature of which we can have no doubt were the dishes (disci), cups, pots (olla), basins (bacinis), bowls (ciphi), spoons (cochlearia). The pelves were probably heavier dishes than the disci. The terms de auro and de aurato appear to mean merely gilt, but the value as compared with the weight of Bishop Bitton's spoons shows that they were of gold. The salarium, one of which appears in each inventory, was the saltcellar; but the thirty-two salsaria in the one inventory and the fifty-eight in the other were more probably what we should now call saucers, in which other condiments were served besides the salt. In both inventories mention is made of bowls of mazer. We in vain attempt to learn with certainty the material of which the mazer bowl was made. They were probably of wood—they had sometimes silver covers, and were placed upon silver feet. The camara with its mazer cover was probably a casket of the same material, and, being costly, had it feet of silver gilt. There were no less than fifteen pictures in Bishop Bitton's inventory. The weight of the silver as well as the value is given. In Nicolas's Testamenta Vetusta, p. 79, we read of twenty-four dishes and as many saucers of silver; p. 92, six dishes and six saucers; p. 93, twelve dishes and twelve saucers, &c. The silver spice-box occurs in both the inventories, but rather differently described.

Both the bishops had their chapels furnished with books, sacred utensils, and vestments, all of which were their private property, and sold by the executors as were the other effects. The service books are described in the subjoined inventories:

The chapel of Bishop Gravesend had but a single missal, a psalter, and two portiforia besides the quaterni, books of occasional offices, of four leaves. Bishop Bitton's chapel was evidently much better provided not only in respect of the number but of the value of the books. The "Canon per se" was that part of the service which begins "Te igitur clementissime," and ends with the words "Ite missa est."

[a] Baudekyns.—Cloths of the most valuable texture, highly ornamented and embroidered, which were presented as offerings to the church, though on what occasions displayed does not plainly appear. The inventory of Dean Baldock contains an account of no less than one hundred and twelve such articles; they must have been of ancient origin, no less than forty of them being described as very old (vetustissimi), thirty-one as in moderate condition, and six a little better. Of the rest a very minute description is given: red, purple, and mauve were the chief colours. They appear to have been frequently offered at funerals for the souls of the deceased, and at other times as vows. Three were given by Henry III., two of them on the day when he came to the cathedral cum cleri, two more by Edward I. and his queen, another for the soul of his son Alphonso, and again two by them on their return from Wales. The embroidery was not limited to badges with eagles, leopards, and griffins; historical subjects were portrayed—the death of Samson between the pillars and his contest with the lion, our Lord's passion and resurrection, the angels and the shepherds, the crucifix with Mary and John.

In this part of the inventory we must distinguish between the ordinary utensils for the celebration of the divine service and those which were for the use of the bishops alone. These were—the pastoral staff, either of silver or copper; the gloves (chirotheca), differing very much in value and decoration, the single pair of Bishop Gravesend being worked with gold and enamelled, and being of the value of 5*l.*, whilst the thicker pairs of Bishop Bitton did not fetch 10*d.* a pair; the heads of the staffs (cambucæ), one of which was of Paris work; the sandals, and the socks (caligæ); the chrismatorum with the ampulla for holding the oil consecrated by the bishop; lastly the mitra, for solemn or daily use, either plain or adorned with pearls. The buckle or broach by which the cope was fastened, termed morsus, was an ornament upon which artistic skill was employed at great expense, the one described in the inventory being of the value of 4*l.*

Upon the chalices, the crewets (phialæ), the censors (thuribula), the ship (navicula), and spoon for the incense, the pixes of silver, ivory, and of silk, the candlesticks, the stoop for the holy water, the tabernacle of ivory containing the pix, the frontal, or the superfrontal no remark is necessary. The panni offertorii, on which the chalice was covered when presented by the deacon to the priest were probably the same found described in Bishop Bitton's inventory as the tuallia or towels, two of which being for the paten leads to the observation that the paten is not enumerated among the vessels in Bishop Gravesend's chapel. The pelves or chargers in Bishop Gravesend's inventory would seem to be the vessels for washing the chalices and the corporalia, towels of fine linen used for receiving or covering the host on the palix, of which a particular description is given in Alberti, De Sacris Utensilibus, c. v. 135. The corporalia were kept in boxes, now termed repositoria, the coffers being larger boxes. The flabellum or muscanum, Anglicè flyflapper, though not mentioned by Alberti, was reckoned among the utensils to be provided for the proper celebration of the mass. See Ducange, voce flabellum. The capetum striagulatum occurs in Alberti under the name fela stragula, originally meaning a cloth of various colours, with which the altar was to be covered at the conclusion of the mass. The auriculæ of silk were small pieces probably used for placing under the sacred vessels, the cushions for kneeling. The absconsa is a dark lantern—it was used by the abbots and priors on the inspection of the dormitories and choir. Of the chaufepoins, three in number, less in value than the absconsa, we find no description—they are mentioned in the inventory in Dugdale as chaussepoins, but following the absconsa in the inventory, we may conjecture that they were of somewhat similar construction, and used to warm the hands. The chrismatorum is described as the vessel in which the ampulla is placed containing the holy oil. The chrismatorum might be of gold, but the ampulla of glass or crystal.

In the inventory of Bishop Gravesend we find three distinct valuations: robæ, lectualia, tapeta, &c., under which are included personal clothing, bedding, and carpets. In that of Bishop Bitton these are all included in the camera, but the articles were probably found in different chambers.

Robæ would seem to be the general term for all these articles of dress, the supertunic being the name for the chief upper garment, of which Bishop Gravesend possessed no less than sixteen of various qualities; to most of these was a hood attached (capucium), and there was scarcely one which was not ornamented with some kind of fur. It will be observed that the cloth or other material of which these clothes were made were quite different from those used for the sacred vestments: they are—persicum, burnetum, bluet, Cendryn, brunum camolinum, ponnaz, murrata, Russet de Dowey, panum mixtum. The tunic, supertunic, caputium, mantell, and corset are the only articles of dress in Gravesend's inventory; the robe and cloche in Bitton's were probably of different form. The coverings for the head were capella and pilei—what the gorgerium was is doubtful. The furs were Strenlyng, minuti varii, and grossi varii, lambskin, grisum, popet, and wolfskin.

The meaning of some of these terms is doubtful. The bulges for the books of the chapel may be either leather cases, or the palmantona described in Alberti as the small tapers held in the hand to give light to the officiating minister. What the pair of bezants and the pair of angularum crocei coloris were is unknown. To the angula there were buckles (plustularia). The forcera were boxes or chests of leather. Among the other articles we may note the chess-board (scaccarum) and the men (familia), the leashes and collars for the harriers, the coffer, a strong chest bound sometimes with iron, and last of all the brazen mortar for pounding spices, the value of the brass per lb. being two pence halfpenny, ten pence of our present money.

The kitchens (coquina) of the two prelates appear to have been very differently provided with utensils, that is if the respective inventories are correct. Nine vessels of various kinds, the value of which are given in the following list, were the property of Bishop Gravesend; they might, however, have been far more numerous had not John, his head cook, claimed the remainder as his fee.

Johannes magister coquus alia utensilia ad coquinam pertinentia pro fœdo suo obtinuit.

The kitchen of Bishop Bitton was fully furnished as follows, and the inventory is interesting as giving the price per lb. at which the brass vessels were sold, two pence halfpenny and two pence farthing, thus affording data for estimating the comparative value of silver and brass at that time.

The nine "caldoria debilia."

A hand mill for grinding pepper and spices (salsa cum toto apparatu), delivered to the bishop	0	2	6

Three hundred dishes and a pannier or basket in which to carry them.

The other contents of the kitchen. In the kitchen account we hear that fifteen oxen were consumed at the bishop's funeral and by his family, five carcases and three-quarters of beef, probably salted, besides sixty-six dried fish and eighteen hakes, and four bacons; the oxen being worth ten shillings each, and the carcases four shillings.

The mariscallia is that department of the household which was under the charge of the mariscallus or marshal, and which, as the title mariscallus or curator of the horse implies, consisted of the stables. The two bishops, as appears from the following inventories, had each of them numerous horses. The Bishop of London had the greater number, and though his stables are not termed in the inventory mariscallia, yet he had his marshal Richard, to whom a valuable horse worth 40*s.* was given by the executors as a reward for his long and faithful services.

The palfrey was the most valuable horse. We commonly consider the palfrey to be a riding horse; Bishop Gravesend's most valuable horse of the kind appears to have been used in harness, "pro carro defuncti." Of Bishop Bitton's horses, and the use to which they were put, no mention is made, and only one of them is mentioned by name, Pountyngton. But, beside the sumpter horse and the sumpter mule, for carrying baggage, Bishop Gravesend had his carrectarii or horses for carts of different sizes and different uses, the little cart, curta carecta, and that for the kitchen. Thirteen of the horses had names, some of them derived from places—Stanford, Langford, Crundone, and Acton. Pursyk seems to denote the state of the horse Julian to be broken-winded; and from a charge made by the executors for the wages of thirteen garciones, a penny halfpenny per day, taking charge of twenty-two horses at Stepney for nine weeks, we conclude that the bishop's stud was kept there under the care of M. Mansum the steward.

An inventory of the armour belonging to Richard de Gravesend, Bishop of London, and bequeathed in 1313 to his brother Sir Stephen Gravesend:—

II.—Further Notes about Clyst, the Residence of Bishop Bitton, and the Chapel of S. Gabriel, spoken of in the Compotus, pp. 3, 44.

Bishop Bronescombe bought of Ric Fomison, lord of the manor of Sowton, an estate called Bronsburghe for the benefit of the see of Exeter, with the advowson of the church. The deed is in the Bishop's Register.

On this estate of Bronsburghe, part of the tithing of Clyst Sackville, actually in Faringdon parish, the Bishop is supposed to have built the "goodly manor place," so called by Leland (vol. iii. p. 55), the gateway bearing "Janua patet, Cor. Magis."

Within this palace Bronescombe founded the chantry chapel of S. Gabriel. He obtained from Robert Gifford (ob. 1282), a canon of Exeter, the advowson of the next parish of Faringdon; and in 1276 he appropriated the income of that benefice to the support of two priests who served the chapel, reserving a sufficiency for the vicar of Faringdon. This went on about forty years, when the vicar complained of his insufficient income.

Bishop Stapledon, considering that things required an alteration, decided to remove the chapel of S. Gabriel from the said palace to the village of Bishop's Clyst, within the limits of the manor (where his predecessor Bishop Bitton had founded it). This was done 1311, and on Sunday, December 28th, the Bishop (W. Stapledon) collated Robert de Gosham "ad quondam perpetuam cantariam in novâ capellâ de Clystbrigg." (Register, fol. 66.) Ten years later he assigned to the vicar all the tithes of Faringdon parish; but charged him with the payment of eleven marks (7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*) to the chapel of S. Gabriel, and another mark (13*s.* 4*d.*) per annum to the rector of Sowton, in all 8*l.* The ordination to this office is dated 1321. (Regis. fol. 164.)

Oliver gives in extenso the Inquis. ad quod Damnum, Pat. Rot. 3 Edw. II. m. 44, for granting one acre of land at Clist Episcopi for a payment to his chaplain administering in the chapel of S. Gabriel de novo construenda, &c. &c. the said manor of Bishops Clist, belonging to the barony of the bishopric, held of the King in capite.

The site is bounded on the south-west by the road leading to Sidmouth, and on the other three sides by Sowton. From being a residence for two priests it became an hospital or asylum for twelve superannuated clergymen.

Documents dated 1375, 1386, in Brantingham's Regis, ad finem, vol. ii. fol. 25 and 50, relate to payments.

Laymen were buried within the precincts of the chapel. Thomas Granger "familiarius Epis. Ed. Stafford," was buried there 1406 (see Stafford's Reg. vol. i.).

Bishop Oldham, 1508, appropriated the revenue to the Custos and Vicars of the Cathedral of Exon, of which they were deprived temp. Edw. VI. Queen Elizabeth restored the whole to the priest vicars July 5, 1585.

As for the ancient chapel in the palace, that continued to be used as such for more than two centuries. It was afterwards degraded to domestic purposes, but has since been restored by Mr. Garratt, the present owner.

The chapel of S. Gabriel at Clyst Bridge has passed away from the priest vicars (by whom it was granted away on lease) to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The lessee has lately sold his interest in the premises to parties who have converted the old place into a Baptist meeting-house! By the Executors' Account this chapel cost 361*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*, (p. 45).

John Aller, a former rector of Clyst St. George, was the first custos of the chapel of S. Gabriel at the bridge. He died there 1307, and his Compotus is among the archives of the priest vicars in Exeter, a copy of which I have been permitted to annex.[a]

REPORT OF THE COUNCIL

READ AT THE GENERAL MEETING

ON THE 2ND MAY, 1874.

THE Council of the Camden Society elected on the 4th of June 1873 have deeply to regret the loss of JOHN GOUGH NICHOLS, Esq. F.S.A.

Mr. Nichols was one of the Original Founders of the Society. The want of any means of printing and circulating historical books, which no Bookseller would undertake the risk of publishing, had for some time engaged his attention, in common with the late Mr. Bruce, Mr. Wright, and other literary men. The result of a consultation between these gentlemen in 1838 was the plan of the Camden Society, which met with the hearty approval of Mr. Amyot, Dr. Bliss, Mr. Purton Cooper, and others, who took a warm interest in promoting its success, and it was formally established at a meeting held at the house of Mr. Nichols in Parliament Street, where the members of the Society have always met with a hospitable reception.

Of the services of Mr. Nichols as the Printer of the Society, and one of the most industrious and intelligent of its editors, it is hardly necessary to speak. When he died, two books, The Autobiography of Lady Halket and The Sermons of the Boy Bishop, were in his hands, and the numerous notes of all kinds which he left for his own use in editing them will be a monument of painstaking industry and deep erudition, whilst many of them are but too likely to prove, from their brevity, unintelligible to those who have to read the riddle without the power of appealing to the interpreter, who alone possessed the clue.

The death of Mr. Albert Way, formerly one of our Members, and who was the Editor of the Promptorium Parvulorum, one of the most valuable of our publications, has also been a matter of deep regret to the Council, and will, they feel certain, be shared by the Society at large.

The following Members of the Society, they are sorry to add, have also died within the last year:—

DANIEL BENHAM, Esq.
P. H. FISHER, Esq.
FREDERIC GWATKIN, Esq.
JAMES ROBERT SCOTT HOPE, Esq., D.C.L.
Rev. J. WILSON, D.D.

The following have been the Books issued to the Subscribers during the past year:—

I. A Military Memoir of Colonel Birch. Edited by the late Rev. JOHN WEBB and the Rev. T. W. WEBB.

This volume, of which the Commentary, which was the work of the last days of the Rev. John Webb, is the principal feature, is a storehouse of curious facts relating to the period of the Civil War.

II. and III Letters addressed from London to Sir Joseph Williamson while Plenipotentiary at the Congress of Cologne in the year 1673. Edited by W. D. CHRISTIE, C.B.

These volumes are full of news of an interesting and personal character from the Court of Charles II.

In addition to the two books mentioned above as being left in a state of preparation by Mr. Nichols, the Society has by the kindness of Mr. Thoms, the executor of the late Mr. Bruce, been put in possession of a collection of papers left in an unfinished state by its late Director. Of these the most nearly complete series is composed of documents relating to the dispute between Cromwell and the Earl of Manchester in 1644, for which the greater part of the Preface is already written, and for which Professor Masson has consented to add such introductory matter as may still be found necessary. Besides, there are a few papers relating to the Starchamber sentence upon Prynne, to which a fragment of the biography of Prynne may serve as a Preface. There is also a collection of State papers relating chiefly to the marriage of Charles I. and the early years of the reign of that King, with an historical fragment on that period.

The books for the year 1874-5 will probably be—

I. Account of the Executors of Richard Bishop of London 1303 and of the Executors of Thomas Bishop of Exeter 1310. Edited by the late ARCHDEACON HALE and THE REV. H. T. ELLACOMBE.

II. Papers relating to the Quarrel between Oliver Cromwell and the Earl of Manchester. Edited by the late JOHN BRUCE.

III. The Seventh Volume of the Camden Miscellany, containing, amongst other matters, The Accounts of the Building of the Church of Bodmin. Edited by the Rev. J. WILKINSON, Rector of Lanteglos. 2. Papers relating to the Sentence upon Prynne. Edited by the late JOHN BRUCE. 3. Sermons of the Boy Bishop. Edited by the late J. G. NICHOLS and Dr. RIMBAULT.

The Council have thought that they would best meet the wishes of the Society by placing in the hands of Members books which have occupied the thoughts of those who have laboured so much for their interests as Mr. Bruce, Mr. Nichols, and Archdeacon Hale. The Chronicle of England from Lord Henry Percy's MS. will thus be unavoidably postponed for another year. It may, however, be satisfactory to the Society to know that time has not been lost, and that the result of Mr. Hamilton's investigations has been to show that the Chronicle is not a mere abridgment of Stow, but the original from which Stow derived a great part of his information, and that it is even more valuable as giving the impression made upon an ordinary citizen by passing occurrences in the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI, and Mary, than from its narrative of events.

The following work has been added to the list of Suggested Publications :—

Papers relating to the Court of High Commission in the time of Charles I. To be Edited by L. O. PIKE, Esq.

These papers were collected by the late Mr. Bruce, but he had taken no steps towards editing them. The interest of papers in which men like Laud and Abbot freely express their opinions on ecclesiastical matters can be easily conceived.

In conclusion, the Council would again urge upon Members of the Society the propriety of making known as widely as possible the work which is being done, in order that support may be given to the much greater work which is still to be done.

By Order of the Council,

SAMUEL RAWSON GARDINER, Director.

ALFRED KINGSTON, Hon. Secretary.
